Do you feel uncomfortable using online tools? Would you like to feel more at ease on the internet, or even use something like Facebook to stay in touch with friends and relatives?

Boston Public Library has developed a self-guided program called “Learning for Life Online” which will walk you through the process. All you need is a computer and an internet connection to get started!

In their own words: “Learning for Life Online will highlight useful resources, teach best practices, and discuss how to ‘think online.’ Most importantly, you’ll learn how to explore, play with and learn new tools on your own.”

The program already has tutorials on key topics such as email, uploading and downloading files, using search and map features, and more. Visit Learning for Life Online now by clicking here!
